Patna University is the 7th oldest university of India. It was established in 1917. It has played a crucial role in educational, social, economic and political development of our country. It has achieved a distinct place at the national level in the area of Teacher Education. Among the universities of Bihar, only Patna University has the distinction of having a full-fledged Faculty of Education. The faculty is comprised of two Teacher Training Colleges namely Patna Training College and Women's Training College for men and women respectively and the Dept. of Education at PWC which offer the B. Ed. Programme. It also has a Post-Graduate Department which offers M. Ed. Programme for both men and women.

Patna Training College was established in 1908 as a result of Lord Curzon's magnificent declaration on Education Policy (1904). The College has completed 107 years of its existence. It has achieved the status of the mother institution of Teacher Education in the Eastern part of India. Before establishment of the Patna University, Patna Training College was affiliated to the Calcutta University. After the establishment of Patna University in 1917, it became one of its constituent colleges. It is the first institution in the country which started the M. Ed. Programme in 1935. The programme was later shifted to the P.G. Department of Education in 1954–55.

Strong realization of the need and role of women in school teaching led to the establishment of Women's Training College on 14th August, 1951. The college has played a crucial role in the field of Teacher Education during the last six decades. It is the only women's college of teacher education in the State having a constituent status.

Patna Women's College, established the Department of Education on 8th April, 2006 and each year admits 100 students to its self financing B. Ed. Programme.
